ABSTRACT

A cache memory comprises a CAM and a data RAM. the CAM has an associate input and a write input. the associate input being connected to selection circuitry to select write data or associate data so that an associate operation can be effected in parallel with a write operation using the same data to control validation of the write input.